

Sudden Return of Morality and Principles of Character... ...really?

Or could it be a setup for what's to come?

by Kat Rowoldt

Ever wonder why all of sudden there seems to be such a push to expose every misdeed, wrongful touch, and sexual encounter ever committed by someone in the political or entertainment arenas? Odd, I'd say. Our country has been fiercely pushing the edge on porn and acceptable sexual behavior for decades. Television and movies have really set the stage for society to imitate in every way. Why now? What's up?

There has not been a "come to Jesus" moment in our society. There has not even been a push to return to a more conservative lifestyle. Something has to be creating this action that is rippling through our society and airwaves at the moment.

We have witnessed the downfall of morals via our TV and movie screens since the sixties, when married couples were portrayed as sleeping in twin beds on I Love Lucy. On the soap operas today, after all these decades, it's hard to find in the storyline anyone who hasn't slept with the rest of the cast.

Politically we knew of JFK's affairs, Bill Clinton's Oval Office affair, and many a political candidate's woes, but that still didn't seem to matter. So what is motivating this sudden push for propriety?

The first thought is what is all this attention pulling our focus off of? Is there something someone is trying to distract us from?

Then you consider the oddity of the woman suddenly 40 years later wanting to taint the record of Judge Roy Moore. That's a real conflicting discussion! This can be argued from countless angles: youthful folly, he changed his ways years ago, power of forgiveness, revenge payback, etc., etc.

My spirit kept pondering the complexity of the messages which are pressing in on our society at the same time. Since the beginning of time, it is known that sexual misbehavior has occurred. Prostitution is said to be the oldest profession. Culturally, there are some cultures that accept men having a "playmate" on the side while providing and caring for their family. Hugh Hefner, the founder of Playboy magazine, was considered to be the father of the sexual revolution not only in our country, but it reached around the world.

Yet, in our society, while the rules bend in all directions, we still seek after and desire people of strong principles and standards to be our leaders in whatever field we are examining. News of this type of behavior is devastating. Reputations are forever tarnished and destroyed by such "rumors." We are judging the person named as guilty without the right to their day in court.

So why is it happening now? What's motivating this sudden surge? Could it just be coincidental so many are reporting their perpetrators at the same time? Or is this simply a setup on a grand scale? One so masterfully planned, no one would imagine could have been orchestrated?

Food for thought! This may seem like a stretch of a wild imagination at this time, but take a moment and look at the various pieces which are potentially already in place, the grander goal of an organization, and the huge hurdle it needs to overcome.

Part of the Islamic civilization jihad plan in North America has been to move key people into prime leadership positions throughout our country, into various industries and arenas (political, education, military, law enforcement, entertainment, city and county offices, etc.). What better place to hear and see, to know who has been doing what, and then simply sitting on this type of, and other, information until the time is right. This may be part of the master plan which was exposed via a document (1991: An Explanatory Memorandum of Agreement on the General Strategic Goal for the Group in North America) used in the Holy Land Foundation Trial in Dallas, Texas in 2008, the largest successfully prosecuted financing and Hamas trial in U.S. history.

Next, news sources are sought to push the scandals out through main stream media (MSM) channels. They in turn contact the reported victims who have been listed one-by-one on data sheets over the years/decades to verify and build their news report.

The victims begin to get calls from these accredited news sources wanting to expose their story for the whole world to know how they were wrongfully treated all those years ago. It's payback time. It's money in their pocket time for the scars they've had to bare all these years.

Why?

Think about the bullets which some men are sweating at this very moment wondering if they will be the next one called out on the carpet; be they politicians, media moguls, entertainers, athletes, etc. Think about how they are pondering if their political careers, business careers, mega-million empires will tumble if they are exposed. Consider the thoughts they are thinking about what they could use to defend themselves or better yet, stop this pending nightmare. Most would give almost everything for the sake of saving their precious reputations and money.

There is one sure way to stop this nightmare cold in its tracks, where no woman would risk reporting such a situation publicly. Only one sure-fire way to forever end the possibility of being exposed and losing everything. Under such pressure and stress, what an incredible time to suddenly support something typically they (political and other leaders) would be forever against in every sense of the word. Oh, how this very moment makes living under Sharia law appear to be a good thing.

Huh???

Under Sharia law, a woman cannot report a rape or any sexual misconduct without four (4) male eye witnesses who will agree she was raped. In other words, rape and foul play become a thing of the past. The victim, male or female, will never say a word. To report such a thing without eyewitnesses means you were promiscuous and stoning to death is your reward. That's Sharia law.

What an amazing set-up to create a need for men to think differently about Sharia. Sharia is Islamic law. Islam is Sharia. Sex is and always has been a powerful driving force. How many men in power at this very moment are looking for a solution to this problem we could call "ghosts from their past?" God help us if that is what is behind this sudden push for morality.

Crazy it sounds. Far-fetched it may seem. But what logic can you put forth to explain the sudden exposure of men's misdeeds all over the country without a known driving force? Give it 3-5 years to sink in. Give it 5-7 years to become a reality.

Who would have ever dreamed our society would be supporting sanctuary cities where murderers, drug dealers, and felons can roam the streets without recourse? When in our history could people be deported numerous times, only to return, murder someone, and stand trial and have their "past" misdeeds hidden from jurors during the trial? Would you have ever dreamed people who are not citizens of our country would be allowed to vote here? This is our country today.

Maybe this isn't too far-fetched of a thought after all. We are the sleeping giant who has allowed millions of Trojan horses to enter inside our gates. We have in our hands their documentation of their plans to overthrow our country and yet we continue to allow them to operate and follow through with their plans.

Lord, please continue to have mercy on this country while we, a small remnant, try to awaken those who do not want be disturbed. Better to be disturbed by us, than the day of reckoning which lies ahead if they succeed.

Until next time....
