A Word or Two About Islam

Islam means submission. The word "Islam" means submission. In the context of the Muslim religion, the Islamic religion, the word is taken to mean submission to the will of Allah. The first duty of a Muslim is to submit to the will of their god, Allah.

We, we Americans are endowed by our Creator with certain unalienable rights, among which are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Our God has endowed us with the unalienable right to liberty. This is the fundamental difference between our cultures.

Submission and Liberty are antithetical, irreconcilable concepts. We have been told by both presidents Bush and Obama that we are not and will never be at war with Islam. That may well be, but Islam is and has been at war with all the world since the day Mohammed rode out of Medina under the black banner of jihad. There have been ebbs and flows in the scope and ferocity of that war, but it has never, never ended. And it never will end till there are either no Muslims left on this Earth or there are none on this Earth who are not Muslims unless Islam undergoes a radical Reformation.

I urge you to read the Quran. Read it for yourself. Don't take my word or anybody else's word for what it says. Read it. So long as Muslims believe, fervently believe the word of Allah as given them by their prophet, Mohammed, and set out in their sacred book there will not be peace on this Earth till the Earth is utterly dominated by Islam. Thus they are commanded. If you read their book and conclude differently, let me know.

As to an effective Reformation of Islam, I have not the power of mind to envision how nor by whom such might be accomplished. But it must be accomplished. If it is not, we must destroy them, all of them, or they will destroy us. All of us.
